

Tartaglia Communications is a full-service public relations firm that specializes in developing strategic communications solutions for health, science and nonprofit organizations of all types and sizes. Dennis Tartaglia established the firm to provide the personalized service, high-level strategic insight, and results-oriented approach that his clients need to achieve their communications objectives in a cost-effective manner.

For nearly 25 years, Tartaglia has developed high-impact communications programs for a range of national and local organizations, serving as both senior counsel at a leading public relations agency and chief communications officer for major teaching hospitals and voluntary health agencies. His long-standing client and media relationships are a testament to the quality and scope of his work.

Tartaglia draws on his expertise and extensive network of contacts to deliver customized programs that help clients reach their business, policy and educational objectives. While intimately involved in all accounts, he employs a network of trusted and experienced communications professionals who can assist with projects when the need arises. Tartaglia's network includes writers, publicists, designers, video producers, advertising specialists, multicultural communicators, event planners and online marketers, among others.

Tartaglia has designed award-winning campaigns for well-known national organizations like The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Brookhaven National Laboratory and Columbia University Medical Center, as well as for biopharmaceutical startup companies, regional hospitals, and local nonprofit organizations. His work has earned two dozen top awards, including the Public Relations Society of America's Silver Anvil and PRWeek's Healthcare Campaign of the Year. Tartaglia's work is featured in Bulldog Reporter's new "Big Book of Brilliant PR Ideas: 100 Case Studies for Inspiring High-Impact Public Relations Campaigns."
